1. Forced labor camps in Albania are not permanent installations but are moved to various locations where construction projects require the need of forced labor. 25X1
2. From February 1953 to the end of August 1953 a forced labor camp was located about 600 meters north of the village of Morave. Approximately 2,000 laborers, held in this camp, were working on the construction of the new Kucove/Berat airfield. At the end of August 1953, this camp was transferred to the village of Reze, northwest of Tirana, where a new airfield was being constructed.
3. Prisoners in these camps live in wooden barracks which are dismantled and taken with the prisoners when they are moved to a new location. 25X1
